MCKEE FOODS AND THE OUTDOOR HAPPINESS MOVEMENT BRING FITNESS ZONE TO SEATTLE Fun, accessible, social fitness environment to improve public health, well being

Collegedale, Tenn; Seattle, WA. — McKee Foods announces their partnership with The Trust for Public Lands and has committed resources to help bring several Fitness Zones[®] to life. The Trust for Public Land's Fitness Zone[®] program establishes areas around Seattle that give residents access to sturdy, weather-resistant cardiovascular and weight-training machines. On Saturday, April 30, the Fitness Zone[®] in Powell Barnett Park will be publicly dedicated at 10 a.m.

In regards to the Fitness Zone[®] areas, Chris McKee, executive vice president of Marketing and Sales for McKee Foods, states, "Enjoy snacks, even ours, in moderation. But, when it comes to being active outside, we suggest immoderation. McKee Foods applauds this provision of fun, accessible, social fitness environments that empower people to get out, get active and improve their overall health and sense of well-being."

"Research shows that parks — and The Trust for Public Land's Fitness Zone[®] areas in particular— directly improve our health and wellness. Installing free outdoor fitness equipment in neighborhoods where gym memberships are too pricey to be practical empowers communities in the fight against obesity," said Brenda McClymonds, The Trust for Public Land's senior program director.

People interested in learning more about the movement can visit OutdoorHappinessMovement.com to hear about upcoming projects across the US. Visitors to the site can also make a pledge to go outside, have fun and find what makes them happy. For each person who takes the pledge, McKee Foods will donate additional funds above the $1 million goal.
